NAME & RANK OF OTHER PERSONNEL																		ANALYSIS
STRAWSER, L. C., Ense., USNR																		Fuel pressure port engine increased from 17 lbs. to 21 lbs. Flowmeter dropped to zero. Engine began running rough and cutting out. Pilot went on single engine. Ten mins. later fuel pressure std. engine began to drop. Fuel pressure could not be maintained with wobble pump. Std. engine quit and dead stick landing was made at sea.
LAMB, C. H., Ense., USNR																		MATERIAL FACTORS:
TADMAN, W. F., AMM1/c, USNR																		A complete failure of the fuel system, plus the loss of No. 1 and No. 12 stacks was the immediate cause of the forced landing. Extremely rough sea condition was the immediate cause for sinking plane after several attempts were made to take it in tow.
McMULLEN, J. P., AMM1/2(T), USNR																		RECOMMENDATIONS:
FUSCO, W. C. ARM2/c (T), USNR																		It is suggested that all air-sea rescue vessels be briefed on seaplane handling under heavy sea conditions and a standardization procedure be put into effect.
